Constructing Excellence in the North East has launched an online monitoring tender service for the region's construction industry.

The TenderTap service is a Nimis Limited solution and was jointly funded by The North East Regional Portal (TNERP) and the North East Centre for Excellence.

The service provides a constant flow of new business opportunities for Constructing Excellence members from hundreds of sources.

Relevant opportunities are then fed into the Constructing Excellence TenderTap service for members to browse.

An invited audience at Hardwick Hall heard North East Centre for Excellence chief executive David Wright explain how new online service offers fast and direct access to hundreds of business opportunities for the construction industry.

Also speaking were the Regional Portal's chief executive Norma Foster and head of business development Pascal Fintoni.

Pascal explained the benefits of using TenderTap: "The service provides access to relevant tenders for the construction industry saving time and money.

"TenderTap can also help companies compile a contacts database, which can form an integral part of any market research strategy, find out who have won recent contracts in their industry and offers translation facilities to aid with international trade."

Norma spoke about the Regional Portal's contribution towards the procurement agenda in the North East. "The Regional Portal has been actively working to help the region become better at procurement.

"We have an electronic tender alert service that was launched in 2002 by Prime Minister Tony Blair and also offer a range of relevant training courses from one-day workshops on selling to the public sector and bid writing to full professional and internationally recognised project management training.

"We even offer Prince2 project management training specifically for construction companies in the region.

"PRINCE2TM is the UK's accepted 'best practice' project management method and will show firms how to manage construction projects to best effect."
